rules.

General Rules

- Open to individuals or teams, with a maximum of two members.
- Participants will receive a design mockup in Figma or Canva. HTML and CSS must be used to replicate the provided design. JavaScript is optional.
- All contestants will be provided with computer systems or laptops equipped with a basic text editor, Google Chrome, and Visual Studio Code with Live Server extension.
- The web is strictly off-limits for reference or assistance during the contest. Use of ChatGPT or similar services is not allowed. Rely solely on your skills and the provided tools. Violations will result in immediate disqualification.
- Plagiarism or copying existing code leads to immediate disqualification.

Judging Criteria

- Evaluate design accuracy based on layout, colors, typography, and attention to interactive details (50%).
- Assess usability and user experience, emphasizing intuitive navigation and responsive design (30%).
- Scrutinize HTML and CSS for cleanliness, structure, and semantic organization (20%).
- Judges will evaluate the design replications based on the defined criteria. Each judge will independently score the replications, and final scores will be used to determine the winners. In case of a tie, Judges will assess HTML and CSS cleanliness, organization, and structure, favoring the submission with higher code quality.

Note

In the event of any unforeseen circumstances, the decision of the organizing committee will be treated as the final word.
